

A -Reading (9 marks)

a- Read the text and answer the questions:

Genes are like a set of instructions for making a living thing. Flower or elephant, fish or human: they are all what they are because of their genes. When scientists found that they could change (or modify) things by taking out or adding genes. Many new things became possible, including genetically –modified (GM) foods and other crops. We can now artificially create plants that produce more food than natural ones, crops that can resist attacks by pests, rice that can grow in salty water, plants that work like medicine, and many other amazing things. To some people, this makes the future look very exciting. In 20 years' time, we will be eating GM food and the global problem of starvation will be solved. However, not everybody is so sure that this is a good thing. There are concerns that GM crops could have a disastrous effect on agriculture and the environment in general. They might, for example, kill natural plants and take over from them. Also, people say that we do not know enough about the effects of GM food on the human body.
