Total Marks

i. Reading and comprehension

(30 Marks)

1) Read the text and answer the questions below:(20 points)

Walking in the countryside (or 'rambling') was popular in 19th-century Britain. For people living in towns and cities, walking was a way of escaping from a polluted environment and the stress of daily life. Access to the countryside, however, was becoming more of a challenge due to an increase in the ownership of large areas of land by a small number of people. A number of walking clubs and groups were set up to protect walkers' rights, and finally, in 1935, they joined together to create The Rambling Society, a national organization aiming to improve access laws and expand the areas where people could walk. A new law was finally passed in 1949 called the National Parks and Access to the Countryside Act. This law set up the first National Parks and Nature Reserves, as well as stating that public footpaths in England and Wales had to be recorded on maps. It was a big step forward as it meant that everyone would know where they were allowed to walk, even if the path crossed someone's land. Many landowners, however, let grass grow over the footpaths so that they were hard to find, so a lot of our efforts were put into walking on as many paths as possible in order to keep them open.

Education in Finland is considered very important. The main objective of Finnish education policy is to offer all citizens equal opportunities to receive education. The focus in education is on learning rather than testing. There are no national tests for pupils in basic education in Finland. Educators from 50 countries have found the three biggest reasons for the country's success. First of all, "there is a near absence of poverty," says Julie Walker. Schools are free, preschool is free, college is free. "Children come to school ready to learn. They come to school healthy. The second reason is the fluency with languages. Most students know three languages: Finnish, Swedish, and English. Nearly every student can communicate in English as well as in their language. The third reason is the degree of respect and trust teachers are given in Finland. They are respected for making a difference to young people's lives.
